Family EUCHARITIDAE

By B. D. BURKS

All members of this family are parasitic on ants. They are, like most parasites of ants, highly modified in structure. Ashmead, 1904 (Carnegie Mus., Mem. 1: 267) characterizes them as being,

"the most singular looking and wonderfully shaped chalcids known, the structure of the thorax, and particularly of the scutellum, being most wonderfully and curiously modified and developed; this development, in connection with the brilliant colors of its members, makes the group the most striking and attractive of any in the superfamily." However, disregarding these adaptive differences, but considering the fundamental structure of the thorax, it is clear that the eucharitids are descended from the same ancestral stem that produced the present-day pteromalids.

Family EUPELMIDAE

By B. D. BURKS

In many classifications the eupelmids are placed in the family Encyrtidae. However, all the eupelmids agree in possessing an array of characters that indicate that they and the encyrtids diverged separately from the evolutionary stem of the chalcidoids at a remote time in the development of the superfamily. Eupelmids may be recognized by having the margin of the prepectus projecting over the margin of the mesepisternum, in having the forecoxae and midcoxae widely separated, and in having the midcoxae so formed that they can be rotated either anteriorly or posteriorly. The encyrtids do not have those characters.

Morphology: Reid, 1941. Roy. Ent. Soc. London, Trans. 91: 433-434.

SUBFAMILY TANAOSTIGMATINAE

This group is primarily Neotropical and Australian, with only a very few Nearctic species. All the species of this subfamily, except one, are known to be gall makers. The one exception is Tanaostigmodes tychii Ashmead, which was supposed to be parasitic on a seed weevil, Tychius, when it was described. This rearing has not been repeated, and the record may be incorrect.

Genus TANAOSTIGMOPES Ashmead

Tanaostigmodes Ashmead, 1896. Ent. Soc. Wash., Proc. 4: 9, 18.

Type-species: Tanaostigmodes howardii Ashmead. Orig. desig.

Two of the species of Tanaostigmodes, albiclavus Girault and howardii Ashmead, often have cynipid inquilines in their galls.
